

Review of the Types of Graphs

bar graph
histogram broken line graph scatter plot

pictograph
circle graph

comparative bar graph

1. This is a graph of plotted points (not connected) that show the relationship, or lack of relationship between two sets of data: _____
2. This compares two or more similar things in good detail: _____
3. This graph shows how one thing can change over time: _____
4. This graph uses pictures or symbols: _____
5. This graph shows how one thing is divided: _____
6. This graph has bars that shows frequencies of data organized into intervals:

7. This graph compares two or more similar things with two sets of data:

8. This graph usually requires a legend: _____
9. This graph has a range of data on both axes: _____
10. This graph is sometimes known as a pie graph: _____
11. This graph compares two or more things with less accuracy, but with more visual effect: _____
12. This graph has bars with no gaps in between: _____
13. This graph has pairs of bars with no gaps in between: _____
14. This graph has bars with gaps in between: _____
15. This graph usually converts its data into percents: _____